On seeing Amit's deadly fall that happened while boarding the train, his friend Ritesh jumped to his rescue and held his hands for nearly 20 seconds.

Mumbai: One of the most common scenes at railway stations across the country is of people peering over platforms and it's this callousness that leads to mishaps where people fall over into the tracks.

Apart from peering over the platform, people are also told to watch their step while boarding. But when do we ever listen?

And that's where things went wrong for a man named Amit. He was stuck between a speeding train and the platform in Mumbai's Khopoli station. Amit accidentally slipped and fell down into a narrow gap.

According to Mumbai Mirror, Amit, who was unconscious by the time the train had completely passed, was pulled back up and taken to a local hospital in Khapoli. He was later discharged.
