The 33-year-old left nothing to the imagination as she did pose after pose with only her hands covering her private parts.

Wearing only a gold chain necklace with matching earrings, Ashley sat on the ground with her toned legs front and center.

She positioned her body to cover her nipples but pushed her cleavage together in the sexy video.

The fashionista appeared to only have on natural eye shadow, mascara and light foundation.

Ashley showed her nearly 12 million followers her famous curves as Kelly Rowland's 2020 dance song, Crazy, played.

â€œI love me, not everyday, but most! Anyways.... Body-ody-ody-ody-ody-ody-ody-ody-ody,â€• she captioned the post.

Fans immediately began to praise Ashley's confident post, including the former Destiny's Child singer.

As she preached self-love and body positivity to her 11.9 million followers, Graham swayed to the Destiny's Child alum's song and rocked a fresh-faced makeup look.

“Wit-cho-fine-a!!! make em go crazy, boo,” she wrote alongside the heart-eye emoji. 🍷

Ashley and her filmmaker husband, Justin Ervin, 32, welcomed their firstborn on January 18, 2020.

The body-positive star encouraged mothers to feel less shame as she shared a candid clip of her breast feeding.

She said as she pumped milk and stored it in a freezer so that she could attend the fashion extravaganza and grace the catwalks in Italy.

The runway star wrote over a sweet video of her feeding her son: "Reunited after four days!!!

"I pumped almost every 3 to 4 hours to keep my supply up while I was in Italy.

“And I had so much breast milk in the freezer so I didn't have to worry if Isaac was going to have enough food while I was gone.”

In the months since she gave birth, the star has been transparent about motherhood and shared a powerful photo of herself mid-labour experiencing her “greatest pain.”

The striking snap was shared with her 10.6million followers, and shows Ashley screaming during labour.

LA-based Ashley wrote: "This is the face of my greatest strength. The greatest pain I've ever known and the greatest accomplishment that I've ever achieved.

"On this International Women's Day understand that despite whatever pain or trial we have all experienced as women, we are also strong, powerful and capable of accomplishing greatness."

The labor pic has resulted in a number of new followers - both famous and otherwise - was praised for sharing the jaw-dropping moment.
