Lauryn only recently revealed the name of her baby son, Kairo Walker.

The single reality star gave birth last April and shares her son with Manchester City ace Kyle Walker.

For nearly a year she had only referred to him as 'Junior'.

She took to her Instagram page to tell her fans what her son's name really was.

"Happy to finally share with you all" she wrote alongside a photo of herself wearing a bracelet in tribute to the tot.

"Kairo Walker. You are my everything," she added.

Followers loved the name, which was inspired by Spanish thriller, Money Heist.

She chose the name after becoming obsessed with TV series, Money Heist, where characters are named after major cities

Explaining the name choice in an interview with Closer, she said: "I was pregnant in the middle of the pandemic so I got into watching Money Heist."

She also defended giving her son his dad's surname, saying it was a deal she wanted to honour

“I really liked how all the characters were named after cities. That’s how I chose his name, Kairo, after Egypt’s capital but spelt with a ‘K’ to make it unique.”

The reality star also defended giving Kairo his dad's surname after the pair only had a short fling in 2019.

“Single mums have questioned why Kairo’s surname is Walker because they say they don’t want to give the father the satisfaction of them having their surname,” Lauryn said.

“It was a mutual decision to name him Walker and I honoured that.”

Lauryn gave birth in April last year and described Kairo as her 'miracle baby' after her long battle with endometriosis

“I appreciate there was speculation, but I don’t feel I constantly have to justify myself for any decisions that are made with our son.”

She also revealed it can be hard being a single mum, but having her sister and CBB star Chloe Goodman also raising her daughter at the same time is a big help.

Chloe gave birth to Isla in June last year and shares her with footballer fiancé Grant Hall.

Lauryn admitted being a single mum was hard, but Kairo gave her all the strength she needed
