

Nurses At Turkey Hospital Protected Newborns When Earth Shook

12/02/2023 21:35 by admin

The nurses decided to protect the babies in the neonatal intensive care unit instead of vacating the building when the earthquake tremors were felt.

The nurses are seen holding the baby incubators firmly

Gaziantep: A video of two Turkish nurses going out of their way to protect infants during the 7.7 magnitude earthquake has surfaced online. The clip was recorded on the CCTV camera at a hospital in Gaziantep. The nurses - identified as Devlet Nizam and Gazwl Caliskan - decided to protect the babies in the neonatal intensive care unit instead of vacating the building when the earthquake tremors were felt.

In the clip, the nurses enter the intensive care unit as soon as things start to shake up. The two are seen holding the baby incubators firmly. Their efforts prevented the incubators from tripping over.

The video was shared on Twitter by Turkey politician Fatma Sahin.